The vertical capsule polishing machine is an important piece of equipment in the pharmaceutical production and processing process. Its structural feature is that the capsule is placed in the center of the equipment for processing. The working principle of this machine is mainly to drive the capsule to make a circular spiral motion along the wall of the polishing barrel through the rotation of the brush, so that the surface of the capsule is polished under constant friction with the brush and the wall of the polishing barrel. The polished capsules enter the waste bucket from the discharge port. In the waste remover, due to the effect of negative pressure, the light-weight unqualified capsules rise up under the action of air flow and enter the vacuum cleaner through the suction pipe. The heavy-weight qualified capsules It continues to fall and the material is discharged through the movable discharging hopper, effectively achieving the purpose of polishing and removing waste.

Vertical capsule polishing machines are widely used in pharmaceutical, health care products and other industries that require high capsule appearance requirements, such as capsule medicines, natural health products, etc. This equipment can effectively remove dust, dirt and foreign matter on the surface of capsules, thereby improving the quality and appearance of pharmaceuticals and enhancing their market competitiveness.
