Water-repellent cotton spunlace nonwoven fabric is a special functional material that combines the softness, breathability and water repellency of cotton spunlace nonwoven fabrics. Water-repellent cotton spunlace nonwoven fabrics are made of natural fiber pure cotton as the base material and processed by advanced spunlace technology. Pure cotton fiber has good moisture absorption and air permeability, and is mild and non-irritating to human skin. It is one of the ideal materials for making non-woven fabrics. In the production process, pure cotton fiber first undergoes pre-treatment steps such as cotton opening and loosening, and then is arranged into a net using a cutting-edge carding machine, a web laying machine, and a drafting machine. Subsequently, the high-density needle-shaped water columns formed after pressure are used to entangle the cotton fibers with each other through the action of a water spunlace machine to form a non-woven fabric with a certain strength and stability. In this process, the non-woven fabric is given water-repellent properties through specific process treatment.

The global Water Repellent Cotton Spunlace Nonwoven Fabric market size is projected to grow from US$ 142 million in 2024 to US$ 175 million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 3.6% from 2024 to 2030.
