Abstracts

The global Wet Dog Food market size is predicted to grow from US$ 53100 million in 2025 to US$ 73835 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.4% from 2026 to 2032.

In 2025, global shipments of wet dog food are estimated at approximately 24.8 million tons, with an average selling price of around USD 4,600 per ton. Wet dog food is a type of pet food with relatively high moisture content (typically 50%-80%), produced from meat, vegetables, grains, and other ingredients through cooking, canning, or pouch processing. Compared to dry food, wet dog food offers better taste and aroma, while its higher water content helps supplement hydration and improve appetite. Wet dog food products cover all dog age groups and sizes, and can be formulated for specific functional needs, such as weight management, joint support, or digestive health. As pet owners increasingly focus on nutritional balance and feeding convenience, wet dog food maintains a stable share in the global pet food market and continues to attract premium consumers.

From a market perspective, the wet dog food segment is exhibiting trends toward premiumization, functionality, and packaging innovation. Increasing consumer focus on natural ingredients, nutritional balance, and palatability drives brands to continually optimize raw materials and formulations. Industry trends indicate that wet dog food is evolving toward personalized and differentiated products, such as custom formulations for specific breeds, life stages, or health needs, while offering small cans, easy-open packaging, and portable pouches to accommodate diverse feeding scenarios. Market consensus suggests that wet dog food, combining high palatability with functional benefits, meets pet owners' health + convenience demands, with strong growth potential, while supply chain management, preservation technology, and brand trust remain key competitive factors.
