Most wines on the market are packaged in glass bottles. The glass bottle is not easy to deform, and the slender neck of the container can prevent the leakage of wine liquid. Whether it is a metal cap or a cork, it can withstand the pressure of carbon dioxide in the bottle. At the same time, glass is a poor conductor of heat, and its cold insulation is better than cans. However, the light transmittance of glass will cause the beer to produce a 'sunlight odor' effect, so it is necessary to use dark colors as much as possible in the choice of glass color.
