Trademark protection services are a type of intellectual property legal and technical service offered to businesses and individual trademark holders, providing a full range of services including trademark registration, global database retrieval, similarity and conflict analysis, monitoring and early warning, infringement evidence collection, opposition and review representation, cross-border rights protection, and brand asset valuation. This service combines a professional legal team, trademark examination rules, big data retrieval systems, and AI-powered image and text similarity recognition tools. Through comparative analysis of textual, graphic, and combined trademarks, it helps brands avoid registration risks, reduce infringement losses, and increase examination approval rates, thereby effectively protecting brand identity rights, exclusivity rights, and commercial value. Global demand primarily comes from the manufacturing, consumer goods, e-commerce platforms, cross-border sellers, technology companies, and SMEs undergoing brand upgrades. Individual client requests typically include a combination of retrieval, application, and monitoring. With the acceleration of global branding, cross-border e-commerce, and digital content dissemination, the demand for trademark protection continues to grow, particularly in the online retail sectors of Southeast Asia, the Middle East, and Europe and the United States. Meanwhile, the application of AI recognition tools in infringement monitoring reduces service costs and improves efficiency, ensuring the market's continued steady growth in the future.
