Aircraft Fairing Market Insights

Lucintel forecasts that composite is expected to witness the highest growth over the forecast period because they are widely employed in the aircraft industry and have enabled engineers to overcome hurdles that were previously encountered when using the materials individually.

Within this market, fuselage will remain the largest segment because fuselage is the primary and core body of a fixed-wing aircraft, and it has room for goods, controls, accessories, and people.

North America will remain the largest region over the forecast period due to significant demand for modern aircraft and fleet replacement.
