Abstracts

The global FRP poles market is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.9% during 2014-2019. Lightweight and corrosion resistance properties are the major drivers of the FRP poles market. FRP poles are used in places where poles of other materials face problems, such as coastal areas where salinity may be detrimental, and areas with high temperature fluctuation. FRP poles are non-conductive and are available in different lengths. Hence, they can easily be deployed for utility transmission and distribution applications.

Lucintel, a leading global management consulting and market research firm, has analyzed the global FRP poles market by regions, applications, and processes, and has come up with a comprehensive research report, "Growth Opportunities in the Global FRP Poles Market 2014-2019."
