Abstracts

The Czech Republic has experienced robust growth during the last ten years but is expected to witness a modest rate of 2% over the next five years. The Czech GDP is forecast to reach US $279.8 billion in 2017. The open investment climate and huge potential in sectors such as energy, automotive, retail, and construction is expected to drive the economy over the forecast period.

Lucintel, a leading global management consulting and market research firm, has performed PESTLE analysis of the Czech Republic and presents its findings in "PESTLE Analysis of Czech Republic 2012-2017."

The export oriented economy of the Czech Republic is witnessing economy slowdown due to the European economic crisis, but the Czech Republic is expected to ride over the rough weather on the virtue of its pace of economic growth and huge potential in sectors such as energy, automotive, and retail. Rebound in the growth of exports will further sustain economic growth.

Lucintel's research indicates that the budgetary consolidations of the government are likely to result in a sluggish demand in the private sector in 2012. The economic growth will pick up again in 2013 due to the restored demand in Western Europe supported by large scale stimulation packages in the large European countries.

The Czech Republic has undergone major economic reforms and has privatized a majority of its sectors such as telecom, banking, etc. It is a stable economy registering double-digit growth over 2001-2011, making it a favorable destination for investment.

The report studies the political, economical, sociological, technological and legal analysis of the Czech Republic. The report also covers SWOT analysis and recent economic policies analysis of the Czech Republic.
