Some of the vitamin ingredient companies profiled in this report include Archer Daniels Midland (ADM), Pfizer, Abbot Laboratories, BASF, Koninklijke DSM, Vitae Naturals, Carotec, Groupe Danone, Synthesia, The Kraft Heinz, Fermenta Biotech, Nestle, and Lonza.

Lucintel forecasts that vitamin A will remain the largest segment over the forecast period as there are rising incidence of ophthalmic illnesses, increase in the geriatric population, increasing healthcare expenditure, and the booming food and beverage sector.

Within this market, food will remain the largest segment by application over the forecast period due to the rising popularity of fortified food and the continuous developments and new product launches.

North America will remain the largest region and it is also expected to witness the highest growth over the forecast period due to rising demand for food supplements in the region, on account of their ability to enable weight loss, increase endurance, improve muscle strength, and reduce fatigue. Growing inclination toward a healthier lifestyle, coupled with rising consumer health concerns regarding chronic diseases in developed markets, will continue to play a crucial role in boosting the North American market.
