Abstracts

The bees take about 75% of the nectar or secretions from the flowers of the plants and deposit them in their second stomach. Under the action of various transformations in the body, they repeatedly brew various vitamins, minerals and When the amino acid is rich to a certain value, the polysaccharide in the nectar is converted into the monosaccharide glucose and fructose which can be directly absorbed by the adult body, and the moisture content is less than 23% and stored in the nest, and sealed with beeswax. Honey is a supersaturated solution of sugar. When it is cold, it will crystallize. The crystal which forms crystal is glucose. The part which does not produce crystal is mainly fructose.
