Abstracts

LNG Carrier Cargo Ship referred to a ship that exclusively transport liquefied natural gas. According to the structure of cargo ship can be divided into independent tank type and membrane type. The former is to put cylindrical, pot-shaped, spherical and other shape storage tanks in the ship; the latter uses a double-shell structure, the body shell is the carrying tank of the cargo tank, compared with the independent type, the membrane type has the advantage of high volume utilization. Due to the light weight of the structure, the new LNG carriers, especially large-scale ones, use membrane structures. Liquefied natural gas ships have complex equipment, high technical requirements, and high construction costs.
