Abstracts

Medium density fiberboard (MDF) is a kind of artificial board made of wood or plant fiber by mechanical separation and chemical treatment, mixed with adhesive and waterproofing agent, and then molded at high temperature and high pressure. It is an ideal artificial board. The structure of MDF is more uniform than that of natural wood, and it also avoids the problems of decay and insects. At the same time, it has small expansion and contraction and is easy to process. MDF is mainly used in the furniture industry, skirting board, lintel, packaging materials, door industry, etc. Due to the smooth surface of MDF, it is easy to paste various finishes, which can make the finished furniture more beautiful.
