Abstracts

Moissanite is a lab-created gemstone that is generally perceived as a diamond substitute by consumers. Moissanite is composed of silicon carbide and is created through a thermal process that is patented by Charles & Colvard Ltd, the only manufacturer of Moissanite across the globe. Moissanite has a refractive index of 2.65. Its hardness on Mohs scale is 9.5, which makes Moissanite highly scratch-resistant. Moissanite is available at one-tenth price of the diamond. The differences between the two stones are pretty difficult to spot and can only be detected by a trained eye. Moissanite is also more durable and does not exhibit a yellowish color, unlike other diamond substitutes after a definite period of time.

The report combines extensive quantitative analysis and exhaustive qualitative analysis, ranges from a macro overview of the total market size, industry chain, and market dynamics to micro details of segment markets by type, application and region, and, as a result, provides a holistic view of, as well as a deep insight into the Moissanite market covering all its essential aspects.
