Abstracts

One of the most time-consuming and expensive types of glass manufacturing, custom glass molding starts with standard flat glass or glass blanks and physically presses, spins, or melts the glass into a new shape. Because of the intense engineering and precision process of glass molding, the finished molded glass offers exact custom curved shapes with high quality surfaces.

Common types of glass molding include:

Ultra-precision glass molding and glass press molding

Glass gravity and vacuum assist slumping

Spin molding

High pressure molding
