Abstracts

The nutmeg is the seed of Myristica fragrans, an evergreen tree indigenous to the Banda Islands in the Moluccas (or Spice Islands) of Indonesia and was one of the principal targets in the great race to find a Western route to the Spice Islands – and thus led to the European discovery of the West Indies and the American continent. The tree is unique for producing two spices, because the lace-like filament that encloses the nutmeg gives us mace, a lighter, some would say more elegant, spice that is far less used.
