Abstracts

Quartz stone is manufactured from either an engineered quartz composite or a natural slab that has been polished. Man-made engineered quartz stone is basically formed by blending ground quartz which is about 90% along with resins, polymers and pigments that are about 8-10%. This blend is dispensed in a mold and subjected to hardening process and finally finished into a preferred style & shape. This results in a granite like hard surface and can be used for a range of applications.
