Abstracts

The Smart Bottle has functions such as drinking water reminder and water quality detection. The cup body is embedded with an intelligent control system, which includes a control chip, a display module, a button module, an alarm module, a communication module and a storage module connected with a display time on the control chip. The display module is set on the surface of the cup body. The button module includes a minute adjustment button, an hour adjustment button, an emergency alarm button and an information feedback button. When the control chip receives the output signal of the information feedback button, it sends the starting signal to the communication module, which sends the 'medicine eaten signal' to the doctor or family member; When the control chip receives the output signal of the emergency alarm button, it simultaneously sends the starting signal to the communication module and the alarm module. The communication module sends the 'emergency signal' to the doctor or family member, and the alarm module opens the alarm sound.
