Abstracts

Dairyless frozen desserts replace milk and cream with an alternative like coconut, soy, almond, or cashew milk. Almost all of the other ingredients remain the same between commercially available dairy ice cream and their dairy-free counterparts. Coconut is popular among manufacturers because its saturated fat makes for rich and creamy vegan frozen desserts—but it can pack in more saturated fat than a dairy version of your favorite frozen treat. Pints made with almond, soy, cashew, or other nut milks tend to be lower in saturated fat and calories than those made with coconut cream or milk.
