In centrifugal blowers, also called turbo blowers, the energy is transferred from a rotating shaft to air or gas. A pressure rise is achieved by adding kinetic energy to a continuous flow of air through the rotor or impeller. A turbo blower differs from a turbo compressor by the lower pressure ratio, with the compressor's being above 2.5. A centrifugal compressor increases pressure up to several hundred kPa, while a centrifugal blower performs in the middle range, up to 200 kPa.
