KEY HIGHLIGHTS

Telefonica has a predominant market position due to its acquisitions

Telefonica attained a leading market position in part due to its strategic acquisitions. In April 2003, Telefonica and Portugal Telecom created a joint venture to function in the Brazilian mobile market, and began commercial operations under the name 'Vivo'. Later in 2015, 'Telefonica Brasil' acquired GVT to become the country's leading telecom operator. Telefonica has demonstrated robust growth in these countries backed by the acquisitions it made in recent years.

The company's wide geographical presence mitigates country specific risks

In 2016, Telefonica generated 20.5% of its total revenues from Germany, where the company also reported its highest subscriptions growth, which increased at a CAGR of 22.7% during the review period (2012-2016), from 19.3 million in 2012 to 43.6 million in 2016. This is followed by Brazil with 19.8%; the UK with 17.3%; Spain with 13.3%; Venezuela with 12.0%; Argentina with 4.9%; Peru with 4.0%; Chile with 3.5%; Colombia with 2.6%; and the Czech Republic with 2.1%. Telefonica's wide geographical presence minimizes country specific risks, and exposes the company to growth in the various markets.

Telefonica Spain posted the lowest churn rate out of its operating companies Telefonica reported the lowest churn rates in Spain, with 21.2% in 2016, followed by O2 UK which posted 23.6%. The low churn rates are primarily due to the company's launch of innovative bundled services. For instance, the company launched Movistar Fusion - a converged service that offers a long term option with mixed bundle of services, including fixed broadband and TV services.
