Report description

The report analyzes the global organic foods and beverages market as per various categories such as foods, beverages and supplements. This is further segmented on the basis of individual category products including fresh produce, dairy products, frozen and processed foods, meat and poultry. In organic beverages section, products are discussed as non dairy beverages, coffee and tea, wine and beer. The organic foods segment accounts for the highest share (approx. 86%) in the overall organic food and beverages market. Europe is the largest consumer of organic food, beverages and supplements, while Asian and ROW segment is expected to have the highest growth rates of 20.6% and 16.2% respectively due to high domestic production, increasing per capita income and regulatory reform initiatives in countries including China, India, Singapore, Australia and Latin American countries such as Brazil and Argentina. Increasing organic farming in the world, implementation of government regulations with increasing organic foods supply in conventional food stores are driving market. Development of private labels and increasing interest of large retailers such as Wal-Mart, Tesco and Safeway to sell organic products are playing important roles as well. The organic food and beverages market is also expected to benefit from subsidies, financial aids and R&D programs conducted by different government and non-government organizations.
