Consumer Payment Trends in China: Online Purchasing Q1 2012 highlights the payment habits and preferences of Chinese consumers. It serves as a comprehensive guide, providing business owners analysis of online payment methods. A variety of payment options are offered by China's online merchants today, ranging from online payment to mobile point of sale.

Online Payment and E-Commerce in China 2012 provides the reader with a deeper understanding of e-commerce and online payment in China today while simultaneously displaying the trends that help shape future developments in the market. The data is developed from our systematic and rigorous methodology, where we carried out 100 in-depth interviews with leading online merchants across a variety of sectors.

Mobile Payment in China 2011-2012 Edition is the fifth and latest edition of our most popular report. In it we examine the key issues affecting the market heading into 2012 and forecast growth and major changes through 2015. This year's report focuses on the long-awaited m-payment licenses issued in 2011 -- including profiles of all companies to receive them and what effect they're having on the industry.

China 2020 Whitepapers: The Future of Mobile Payment in China examines China's mobile payment market through in-depth interviews with 20 industry leaders, including executives at leading payment providers, telecom operators, technology companies, and card issuers. We provide our readers with useful data and insightful projections regarding the future of mobile payments in China.
