About

The report brings to your attention profound analysis of feldspar market in Egypt. Historical, present and future trends are covered. Experts' opinions and estimations are provided.

Egypt has significant advantages in terms of mineral deposits; but despite of high mineral potential, local industries have to import many of the minerals from abroad

Egypt holds the largest reserves of feldspar in the world; considerable reserves of feldspar varieties are found in the Eastern Desert of Egypt glass and ceramics are the leading application spheres of feldspar accounting for nearly two thirds of domestic demand

Egypt feldspar resources are more than adequate to meet the country's demand, but foreign and governmental investments are necessary to improve the situation in the mining industry (regarding prospecting, evaluation, and developing the mining and mineral processing technologies) demand will continue to prevail supply and balance of trade will be negative, imports will grow
