Abstracts

The global desktop PC industry witnessed a significant downturn in 2023, with shipments totaling 67.927 million units, marking an 11.6% decrease from 2022. Despite resolving excess inventory in the desktop PC supply chain and achieving healthier inventory levels, the market remained impacted by sluggish global economic conditions and high inflation rates, leading to sustained weak consumer demand for PC products. Nevertheless, the global desktop PC market is expected to rebound in 2024. This report offers forecasts for global PC and desktop PC shipment volumes from 2024 to 2028, including a breakdown by shipment destination and customer type, along with insights into current and future industry development trends.
