Abstracts

An automatic side loader is a truck with an elevator. Similar to the front-end loader, the waste is compacted through an oscillating seal partition at the front of the loading hopper that forces the waste through the hole into the main body and hence towards the back of the truck. Automatic side loaders require only one operator, while traditional rear-loading garbage trucks may require two or three people, and have the added advantage of reducing work injuries due to repeated heavy lifting. Because of these advantages, it is more popular than traditional manual collection. In general, automatic side loaders use standardized wheel carts compatible with automatic truck lifts.
