Banana plant not only gives the delicious fruit but it also provides textile fiber, the banana fiber. It grows easily as it sets out young shoots and is most commonly found in hot tropical climates. All varieties of banana plants have fibers in abundance. These fibers are obtained after the fruit is harvested and fall in the group of best fibers. It is mainly used by cottage industry in Southern India at present. Some driving forces include strong fiber, it has smaller elongation, it has somewhat shiny appearance depending upon the extraction & spinning process, it is light weight, and it has strong moisture absorption quality. It absorbs as well as releases moisture very fast and it is bio- degradable and has no negative effect on environment and thus can be categorized as eco-friendly fiber.
