A perfluorinated compound per- or polyfluoroalkyl chemical is an organofluorine compound containing only carbon-fluorine bonds and C-C bonds but also other heteroatoms. PFCs, also known as perfluorinated chemicals, have properties that represent a blend of fluorocarbons and the parent functionalized organic species. Perfluorochemicals and their derivatives are manmade chemicals that have the properties of compounds representing fluorocarbon compounds (containing only CF and CC bonds) and parent functionalized organic compounds. They are based on the element fluorine, which are widely used to create water and soil repellency in fabrics, including clothing and textiles, fabric protection, furniture and some types of fire fighting foam.
