Canine dilated cardiomyopathy drugs are used to treat heart muscle diseases which causes the heart to weaken and enlarge. This results in weakened contraction and poor pumping ability of the heart. The canine dilated cardiomyopathy is prevalent in certain breeds of dog and observed to be rare in crossbreeds dogs. Canine dilated cardiomyopathy drugs are directed at enhancing systolic (pump) function of the heart, dilating the peripheral blood vessels to lower ventricular workload, controlling heart rate and cardiac arrhythmias. Canine dilated cardiomyopathy drugs treatment goals are achieved by the administration of cardiac medication which may be delivered through injections in an emergency situation or orally in stable animals.
