Abstracts

Carbon skin wetsuit is made with open cell neoprene. The material differs from the material used for classic open cell neoprene wetsuits as the external smooth skin is coated with a polyurethane film, with a carbon fiber finish, which makes the material highly resistant to abrasion and tear. This special neoprene simplifies the wearing and stripping of the wetsuit by making it a safer operation. Carbon skin, thanks to these features, can be used when spearfishing in situations where the wetsuit is exposed to interference with the sea bottom and rocks. The external coating also protects the wetsuit from UV rays. Carbon skin has all the mechanical advantages featured by standard cell wetsuits versus wetsuits with lining such as: softness, elasticity and the property of drying very fast.
