Abstracts

Cognac comes from the Cognac region of France, and is double distilled using pot stills. The European Union and some other countries legally enforce the use of 'Cognac' as the exclusive name for brandy produced and distilled in the Cognac area of France, and the name 'Armagnac' for brandy from the Gascony area of France. Both must also be made using traditional techniques. Since these are considered 'protected designations of origin', a brandy made elsewhere may not be called Cognac in these jurisdictions, even if it was made in an identical manner.
