Abstracts

Honeycomb core sandwich panel is formed by adhering two high-rigidity thin-face sheets with a low-density honeycomb core possessing less strength and stiffness. When weight savings are critical, strength is a requirement and quick delivery a must, honeycomb core sandwich panels offer huge advantages over solid composite plates. They are constructed of composite laminates, also referred to as 'skins,' with a honeycomb core of aluminum or aramid bonded between the two skins. Honeycomb core sandwich panels offer higher strength-to-weight ratios than solid composite laminates.
