Abstracts

The presence of a large number of target patients and the rising incidence of sports injuries and accidents are the main factors driving the growth of the compression therapy market. Based on products, the compression therapy market is segmented into compression garments, compression correctors and compression pumps. Compression garments are expected to occupy the largest share of the compression therapy market. This is mainly due to the use of compressed clothing in various indications, such as varicose veins, edema, DVT and lymphedema. Such as dealing with several chronic diseases.
