Abstracts

Content moderation is the process of monitoring, assessing, and filtering content that has been posted to your online channels. The two most common types of content moderation are pre-moderation, where submissions must be approved, and post-moderation, where potentially sensitive content is identified and checked after it has been posted.

As businesses connect ever more closely with their customers, content moderation is becoming an essential piece of online business strategy. Without a content moderation system capable of enforcing high standards across all areas of your site, a small minority could dismantle the brand reputation that you've worked so hard to build.
