Abstracts

A crane runway structure is part of an overhead crane structure that supports the overhead crane both vertically and horizontally. A crane runway includes the columns for vertical support for the bridge girder(s) as well as the rail upon which it travels. A crane runway also supports the framework from which the crane operates, including the rails and brackets. Generally speaking, a crane runway can be constructed from a rolled section of I-beam, a welded I-beam, or a box girder.
