Abstracts

Dry pasta or noodles are products of any shape made from cereal flour with or without the addition of egg and/or other ingredients by dough formation, shaping and drying without a fermentation or baking process. Dry pastas and noodles can be boiled with water. Usually has a long shelf life. It needs to be dried for a few days at a low temperature to evaporate all the moisture, allowing it to be stored for a longer time. Dry pastas and noodles work best with hearty dishes such as gravy, soup and casseroles. Once cooked, they usually grow to twice their original size.
