Abstracts

Distribution ERP software manages logistics operations as well as front- and back-office activities of wholesale and distribution companies. This type of software is used to determine product demand and ensure that products sold are delivered on time. Distribution ERP is used mostly by departments in charge of inventory, warehousing, and logistics. Since distributors sometimes combine products before selling them, most distribution ERP software offer features for assembly and kitting. Most distribution ERP solutions also provide modules for accounting, sales, and purchasing, and sometimes human resources.

ERP software for wholesale distribution provides tools to help you manage sales orders, pricing, shipping, sourcing, and billing, letting you streamline your business processes so all your information is in one secure location. With accurate, real-time information available, situations needing attention can be identified early and addressed quickly.
