Abstracts

At present, the Fischer-Tropsch synthesis catalyst for industrial application is an iron-based catalyst and a cobalt-based catalyst. The cobalt-based Fischer-Tropsch catalyst has the characteristics of high activity, high linear saturated heavy hydrocarbon selectivity and low water gas shift reaction, and is in line with international carbon emission reduction. Trends have thus become a research hotspot in this field. Cobalt-based catalysts have high chain growth ability, and the products are mostly heavy hydrocarbons, which are not easy to be carbonized, less low-carbon olefins and oxygenates, low selectivity to CO₂ formation, and mild reaction conditions.
