Abstracts

Leep, also known as ultra-high frequency wave knife, is a specialized technology developed in recent years for minimally invasive diagnosis and treatment of cervical diseases. It generates 3.8 MHz high-frequency wave through the tip of the electrode. After contacting the body, the tissue absorbs the high-frequency wave and generates high heat instantaneously due to the impedance of the tissue itself. Leep adopts directional radio frequency wave transmitting technology. In the local tissue of emitter, the radio frequency wave field and radio frequency energy directly excite the liquid polar molecules in the tissue to produce plasma oscillation, which can break the molecular bond. Under the condition of low temperature (40 ~70), the fine and minimally invasive cutting effect can be achieved, and the thermal effect of molecular wave vibration and friction can be achieved. Should be used to stop bleeding, tissue ablation and contraction.
