Abstracts

Lidocaine hydrochloride is an anesthetic compound that acts by stabilizing the neuronal membrane by inhibiting ionic fluxes. These are required for the initiation and conduction of nerve impulses, which then performs the local anesthetic action. Lidocaine hydrochloride is largely utilized as a local anesthetic compound for dental procedures by nerve block or infiltration techniques.

The prime factors that drive the market are large scale requirement for anesthetics in surgeries along with increasing application of lidocaine hydrochloride in dental procedures. However, contraindications of lidocaine hydrochloride in patients who are allergic to local anesthetics, especially the amide type and side effects such as idiosyncrasy & hypersensitivity among many others restrain the market growth. But research and development to exploit the drugs full potential in pain management and treatment methods will offer lucrative opportunities for the market growth.
