Abstracts

A light-current-voltage (LIV) test is one of the essential tests that a laser diode must go through to ensure its reliability for post production use. This test will help to verify the operating characteristics of your laser device. The test works by driving current to your laser diode and measuring the resulting voltage and light output. The results are then plotted into a graph, which is known as an 'LIV curve'. LIV test systems usually consist of photodiodes, integrating spheres and source-measure-units (SMUs). In combination with a spectroradiometer, additional spectral properties of the laser diodes such as peak wavelength and FWHM half-band widths can be determined.
