Abstracts

Lupin or lupini beans are the yellow legume seeds of the genus Lupinus. They are traditionally eaten as a pickled snack food, primarily in the Mediterranean basin (L. albus), Latin America (L. mutabilis) and North Africa (L. angustifolius). The bitter variety of the beans are high in alkaloids and are extremely bitter unless rinsed methodically. Lupin beans can be ground into a flour as an additive to wheat flour, enhancing the flavour and lending a rich, creamy colour to the resulting foods.
