Abstracts

Melamine fiber is a heat-resistant and flame-retardant synthetic fiber made of melamine-formaldehyde resin, and a synthetic fiber in which the fiber forming substance is a synthetic polymer composed of at least 50% by weight of cross-linked melamine polymer. Melamine fiber is a cost-effective, heat-resistant fiber based on melamine chemicals, with a continuous working temperature of 400°F (200°C). Melamine fiber is most preferably blended with another synthetic filament to achieve the desired yarn properties

Melamine fibers have important properties such as flame retardancy, excellent thermal/dimensional stability and self-extinguishing properties. This characteristic makes melamine fiber an ideal choice for flame-retardant clothing. The typical fiber length is in the range of 1-12mm, and it shows excellent dispersibility and formability in the wet-laid process. Melamine fibers are processed with standard textile equipment and sometimes mixed with commercial fibers and other heat-resistant synthetic fibers (such as aramid fibers).
