Abstracts

Potassium silicate is a colorless or yellowish translucent to clear glass. It is hygroscopic. Has a strong alkaline reaction. Decomposes in an acid to precipitate silica. Slowly soluble in cold water or almost insoluble in water (depending on its composition), insoluble in ethanol. In the steady state, it is a transparent and viscous liquid, which is blue-green. Soluble in water and acid, and precipitated colloidal silicic acid, the higher the potassium content, the more soluble. Insoluble in alcohol.
