Abstracts

The growing concerns for health, due to the high intake of fat, led to the efforts made by the food industries to develop new foods with positive health benefits. Obesity, heart diseases, and cancer have been implicated with high fat intake. Reducing the total fat content of meats is not only advantageous but viable. It also reduces the calorie content and level of saturated fat. This results in a new product that has high nutritional value and offers the consumer an alternative to traditional meat products.
