Abstracts

Rubber Polymer Sealing Rings are circular or doughnut-shaped rings generally molded from an elastomer. They are used mainly for sealing purposes. To ensure a tight seal over a wide range of pressure, temperature, and tolerance, the elastomer has to be thermally stable over the intended service temperature range, incompressible, but very flexible (deformable) to ensure a tight seal. It also has to withstand the mechanical pressure from the surrounding structure or by pressure transmitted through hydraulic fluids and, depending on the applications, it also has to have good oil, fuel and chemical resistance.
