Abstracts

Carrier-like board (SLP) is the main force of next-generation PCB boards. Compared with HDI boards, it can be more detailed and can shorten the line width/line spacing from 40/50 microns of HDI to 20/35 microns. From the above, SLP is closer to the IC carrier board used for semiconductor packaging, but it has not yet reached the specifications of the IC carrier board, and its purpose is still to carry various active and passive components, so it still belongs to the category of PCB, and the same area of ??electronic components carries The number can be double that of HDI.
