Abstracts

Smart advertising is rapidly gaining popularity and is emerging as one of the most preferred forms of advertising for enterprises across multiple industry verticals such as automotive, gaming, entertainment, consumer goods, and electronics. Compared to other conventional forms of advertising, smart advertising enables marketers to effectively target audience based on multiple attributes related to interests, age, and location, among others, thereby increasing user engagement. Smart advertising combines three technologies: immersive media, device motion, and AI, which work together to help companies initiate and improve their customer engagement and help advertisers to drive consumers to the company's special promotion page or an online store, among other things. Smart advertisement dynamically reacts to its environment by receiving and sending data over an information network and plays a significant role in inciting consumer interest and increasing the conversion rate for the company.
