Automatic Washing Machines has the Highest Market Share

The automatic segment is expected to hold a key share of the market during the forecast period owing to a rise in the number of single-family homes and urbanization has increased the usage of automated washing machines. However, premium segment washing machines can lead to growth in the segment as many players are launching washing machines with multi-functional features, which might draw consumers towards replacing the old models.

Factors like rising disposable income, changing lifestyles, and technological advancements are driving the demand for these appliances. The majority of the time, early automatic washing machines were connected to a water supply via temporary slip-on connectors to sink taps. Later, as high-capacity laundry water hook-ups became more common, permanent connections to both hot and cold water sources became the norm.
