US Portable Washing Machines Market Trends

Rising Demand for Appliances in Households

As the number of households continues to grow, so does the need for residential washing machines. Washing machines are one of the most common household appliances in every home.

With more and more people returning to work after the Covid-19 pandemic, the demand for washing machines is only expected to increase in the years to come. That's why there's a growing need for small, lightweight, and space-saving washing machines that fit snugly into such living spaces.

Moreover, with the hectic lives of working people, consumers are seeking appliances that can save time and energy. Additionally, multi-function and high-tech appliances are becoming increasingly popular, as they can serve multiple household purposes and offer great value for money.

Rising Mobile Penetration Washing Machine Online Sales are on the Rise.

Sales, promotions, and discounts have driven the e-commerce market and enticed Buy Now, Pay Later (BNPL) options on e-commerce platforms. Suburban and remote areas that lack physical stores nearby are more likely to make online purchases through online delivery channels and platforms.

Millennials prefer shopping online because of its convenience. They have access to hundreds of brands to choose from, can compare prices and reviews before making a purchase, and research online platforms to ensure they make a good purchase. E-commerce market penetration in the United States is rising, along with the sales volume.

The home appliances market, especially for washing machines, is primarily driven by major online platforms like Amazon. However, benefits such as easy returns, post-sale support offered by online retailers, and free and one-day delivery features are attracting a significant number of customers.

US Portable Washing Machines Industry Overview

The washing machine market is highly competitive, and international players are present in the market. With the help of energy labels and energy efficiency policies, manufacturers have been able to focus on the development of energy-saving products. Portable washing machine manufacturers are concentrating on developing new products, technological advancements, and expanding their manufacturing capacities. Domestic players are concentrating on the rural areas since foreign multinationals are dominant in the urban markets. Top Players in the Washing Machine Market are Whirlpool Corporation, Samsung Electronics, General Electric, GE Appliances, and Kenmore.
