Abstracts

1. Overview & Rationale:

The report provides comprehensive analysis as well as holistic assessment of the Strategic Initiatives, Strategic Measures, Business & Strategic Developments and Strategic Activities as well as Moves for Airbus Group's Defence & Space Segment for Q1 2014 and provides an analysis of how they integrate with & fit into the medium term strategic picture & overall business strategy against the backdrop of an evolving industry landscape & recovering global macroeconomic indicators with the industry reeling under the pressure of significant defense spending cuts across most traditional markets.

2. Backdrop: Global Defense & Aerospace Industry Juxtaposed between Strong Commercial Segment Growth & Ongoing Spate of Defense Spending Cuts.

The global defense & aerospace industry is juxtaposed between strong & robust growth in the commercial aerospace segment while the continued spate of spending cuts & budgetary pressures continue to impact defense segment significantly.

The U.S. base Defense Budget, impacted by the ongoing spending cuts, has stayed stagnant at just below the $500 billion level for the last couple of years. The base defense budget stood at $496 billion for FY2014 while the FY2015 base budget request gets a cut of $0.4 billion with the baseline for FY2015 standing at $495.6 billion as the focus remains on addressing strategic priorities amid funding constraints. The fallout has been evident with several key defense programs facing cancellation, restructuring or review, most noticeably, the Ground Combat Vehicle (GCV) program of the Army & the Combat Rescue Helicopter (CRH) Program of the Air Force. However, green light for the next generation bomber program and the development of next generation jet engine have been the silver lining for the industry reeling under the pressure of budgetary cuts. However, amid the ongoing topline pressures, several key domains are projected to register growth over medium term in-line with the strategic priorities outlined in the 2014 QDR. Further, the conditions in Europe, too, remain difficult despite the slow pace of overall macroeconomic recovery with France, Germany & U.K. all contriving ways to sustain their defense industrial base.

The commercial aerospace segment, on the contrary, is being driven globally by growing fleet replacement demand across airliners for commercial aircraft with significant growth in air traffic besides significant technological innovations being offered by key aircraft engine OEMs that are delivering a much more optimized operating economics with 15%-20% better fuel burn rate and reduced CO2 emissions. The latest engine introductions have in turn been the key demand drivers for latest aircraft programs being introduced by OEMs across the commercial & regional aviation segments respectively with both Boeing & Airbus in the process of ramping up production rate to address burgeoning order backlogs for their commercial aircraft programs.

The industry OEMs with exposure to commercial segment, like Boeing, GE, Textron, United Technologies & Airbus Group, thus, have been in a much better position & shape than their counterparts & other industry players operating purely in the defense segment. Further, all industry OEMs working towards implementing an array of strategies and plans aimed at partially offsetting the ongoing spate of spending cuts.
